Greetings to Visitors

WELOCOME TO WASHINGTON, our Nation's Capital.

On behalf of the Inaugural Committee of 1957, I extend warmest greetings to all participating in this historic event, either in person or by radio and television.

The theme of this 43rd Inaugural, "Consent of the Governed," comes from a portion of the Declaration of Independence that will live forever:

"We hold these truths to be self-evident, that all men are created equal, that they are endowed by their Creator with certain unalienable Rights, that among these are Life, Liberty and the Pursuit of Happiness. That to secure these rights, Governments are instituted among Men, deriving their just powers from the consent of the governed."

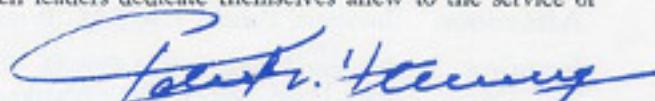

Seldom in our history has the "Consent of the Governed" been given so clearly as it was three months ago. The American people resoundingly chose to continue the leadership of President Dwight D. Eisenhower and Vice President Richard M. Nixon.

This Inaugural climaxes again, as it did four years ago, the crusade which started with a homecoming speech in which President Eisenhower asked Americans everywhere to share his conviction: "I believe we can have peace with honor, reasonable security with national solvency. I believe in the future of the United States of America."

The people of America have re-affirmed their conviction in leaders of vigor, integrity and imagination—leaders who are building a better future for each of us, our children and our grandchildren. The promise of an America prosperous and at peace is a reality. We have security with a sound economy. We continue to seek stability among nations abroad, recognizing American leadership as the greatest force for a just peace in the world today.

Our beautiful city has been the setting for many Presidents and Vice Presidents as they travel the traditional inaugural route along Pennsylvania Avenue. But never before have our citizens gathered, as we do in 1957, to confer again the supreme honor and duty of the Presidency upon a man who represents so deeply the simple prayers of people everywhere for lasting world peace.

May these prayers be answered as our chosen leaders dedicate themselves anew to the service of all our citizens.

DWIGHT D. EISENHOWER

AS DWIGHT D. EISENHOWER begins his second term as President of the United States, history will place him alongside our great Presidents—Lincoln and Washington.

Our 34th President was born in humble surroundings in Denison, Texas. The Eisenhower family moved to Abilene, Kansas where Ike and his five brothers grew up in an atmosphere of a rugged frontier town life in a deeply religious home. All the boys worked after school to help the family's meager income.

After his graduation from West Point in 1915, he met Mamie Geneva Doud, and they were married in 1916. An Army career for the Eisenhowers carried them to a wide variety of assignments and posts. The young officer graduated first in his class from the Army Command General Staff School.

When World War II broke out, Eisenhower moved up rapidly. He commanded the American forces landing in North Africa in 1942, and in December of 1943 became Supreme Commander, Allied Expeditionary Forces. He lead the greatest land, sea and air force ever assembled to victory in Europe.

After signing the unconditional surrender in 1945, and serving as Military Governor of the U. S. zone in Germany, General Eisenhower returned to a grateful America to become Chief of Staff.

In 1948 he was appointed President of Columbia University. During this period at Columbia Mr. Eisenhower made the many speeches which so clearly set forth his principles of government.

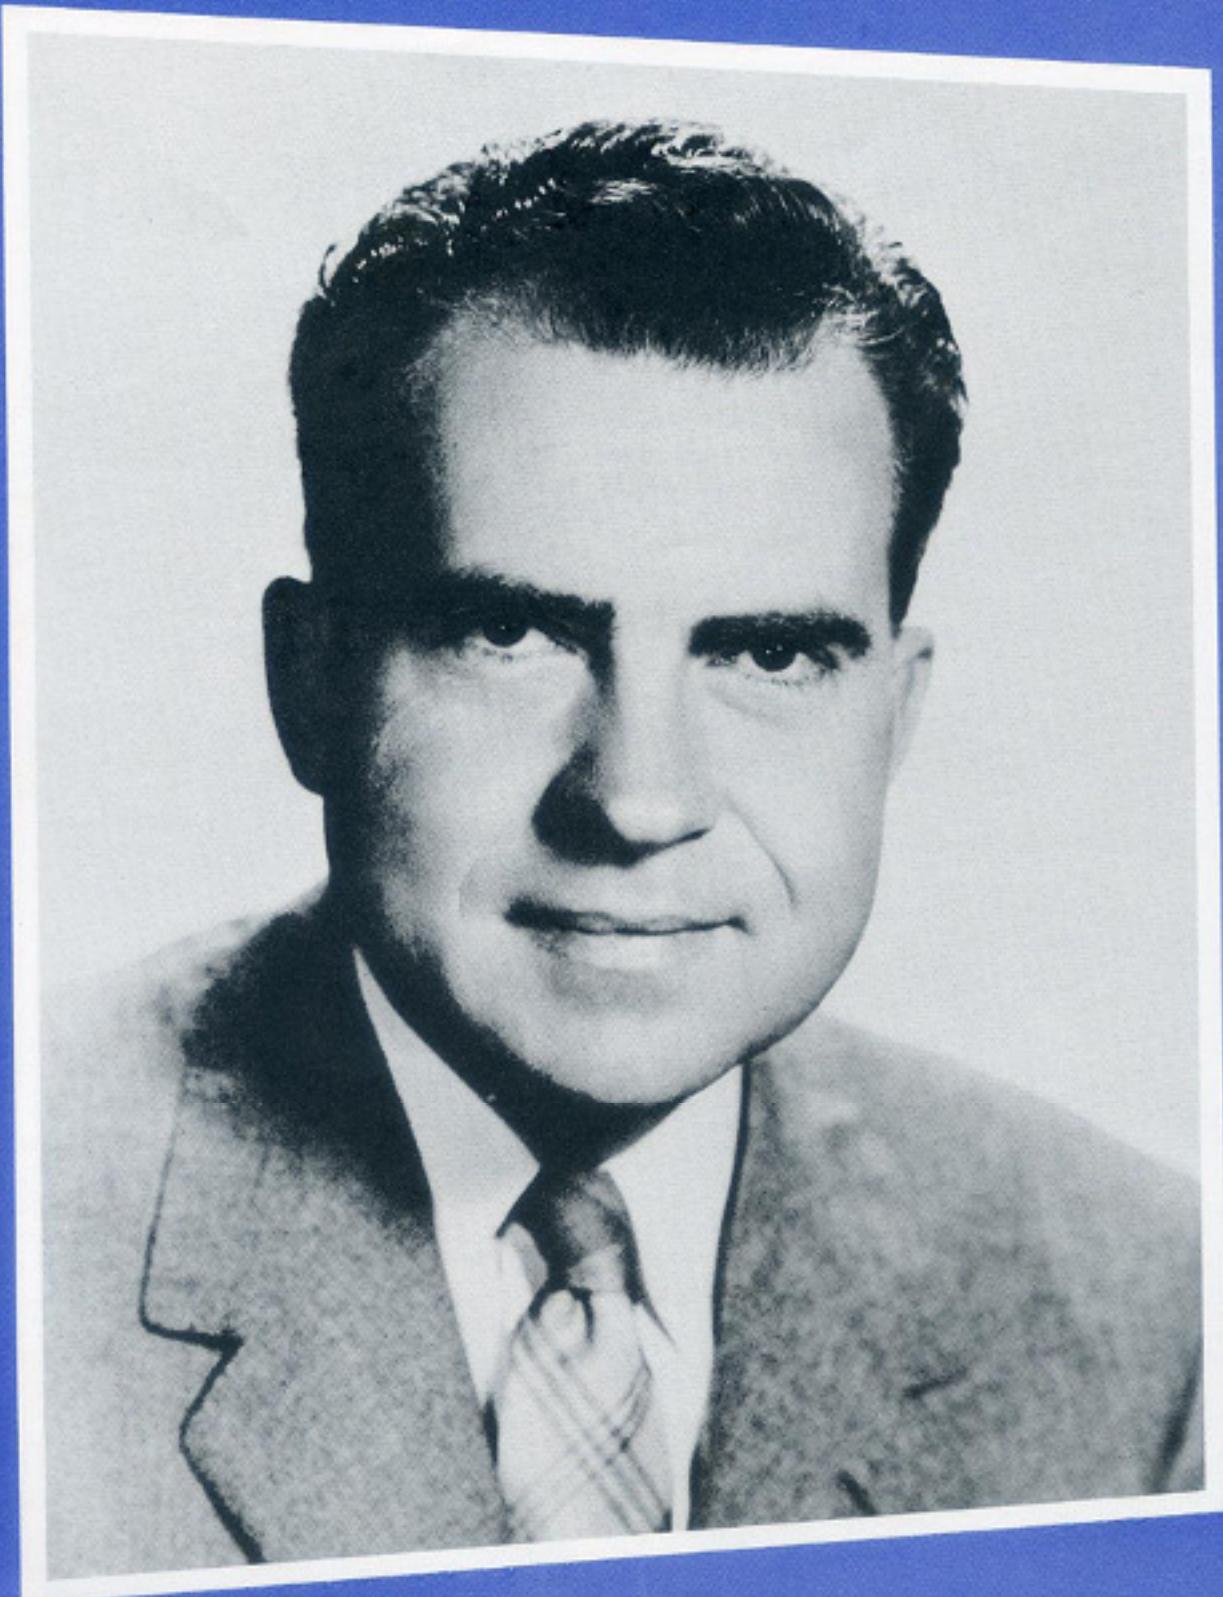

In 1950 he took leave of absence from Columbia to become Supreme Allied Commander in Europe where he further displayed his great abilities for leadership and organization by bringing together many nations into a single force for peace. Again his unique ability to inspire teamwork and assure the success of a common endeavor was demonstrated.

Declaring himself a Republican, Mr. Eisenhower was nominated for President in 1952 and won an overwhelming victory. Four years later the American people re-elected him President by the largest vote in American history and he won the electoral votes of 41 states.

A humble man who places complete faith in the moral and spiritual qualities of people, President Eisenhower restored dignity, leadership and prestige to the White House.

All Americans look forward to four more years of peace, prosperity and progress under this soldier-statesman—a humble, optimistic, God-fearing leader who represents the hopes of people everywhere for lasting world peace.

RICHARD M. NIXON

NO MAN in public life today so typifies the traditional American success story than Richard M. Nixon, our 36th Vice President.

From a young lawyer 10 years ago, to a leader described by President Eisenhower as "the most valuable member of my team," Mr. Nixon has brought real stature to Vice Presidency.

Born in Yorba Linda, California, he learned from his Quaker parents the principles of hard work, thrift and spiritual values. As a youngster, he worked in his family's general store; later working his way through Whittier College and Duke University Law School. His charming wife Pat also came up the hard way. Orphaned early, she worked in hospitals and department stores to put herself through college. The Nixons met in Whittier, California where she was teaching school and were married in 1940. Their first daughter Patricia was born in 1946; and the second, Julie, in 1948.

Mr. Nixon practiced law for five years and after a brief period in government service in Washington joined the Navy. He earned two battle stars during nearly four years of service, including 15 months in the South Pacific.

Elected to Congress in 1946, the young Congressman served with distinction on the Herter Committee studying European recovery. He was re-elected to Congress in 1948—receiving the nominations of both Democrats and Republicans. His voting record, service and outstanding ability led to his election as United States Senator in 1950.

Perhaps the greatest testimony to Mr. Nixon's ability and character was Dwight D. Eisenhower's selection of him as running mate in 1952. Following the Eisenhower-Nixon landslide in the 1952 election, the Vice President has been given precedent-breaking responsibilities. He has presided over Cabinet and National Security Council meetings and plays a major role in forming Eisenhower Administration policies.

Representing the President on two round-the-world trips, Pat and Dick Nixon visited 32 foreign countries, winning countless friends for America.

Although the second youngest man ever elected Vice President, Mr. Nixon is mature in experience, leadership and judgment. President Eisenhower sums up his remarkable career: "Never has there been a Vice President so well versed in the activities of government. Whatever dedication to country, loyalty and patriotism and great ability can do for America, Dick Nixon will do—and that I know."

HERBERT HOOVER

"Above all else, President Eisenhower and his colleagues have sustained two vital forces in the minds of free men. They are integrity and religious faith. No Nation of free men can endure without these pillars of strength. The pursuit of the Holy Grail of Freedom is useless without them."

THE SETTING for the words above was the Centennial Convention of the Republican Party in San Francisco, August 21, 1956.

The speaker was Herbert Hoover, 31st President of the United States, addressing his seventh Republican National Convention. His words were a re-affirmation of his own personal philosophy of freedom, as well as a tribute to the leadership of the Eisenhower-Nixon Administration.

Iowa-born, and orphaned at the age of six, Herbert Hoover has devoted his life to the service of mankind with devotion and one principle as his guide: that government is the servant and never the master of the people. Leaders of our nation have sought his counsel and drawn freely on his ability, vast experience and wisdom.

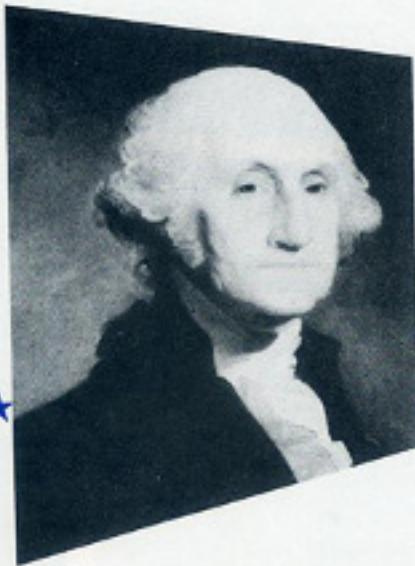

From 1895 to 1914, Mr. Hoover practiced engineering in 20 countries throughout the world. During World War I, he conducted the relief of people in Belgium and Northern France. He also served as U.S. food administrator during the war; after the armistice he was director general of relief and reconstruction of 250 million people in Europe.

After serving as Secretary of Commerce from 1921 to 1928, he was elected President of the United States from 1929 to 1933. During this 12-year period he had a major part in the public works development of our nation. He was chairman of the Colorado River Commission resulting in Hoover Dam, and chairman of the St. Lawrence Water Commission which authorized the waterway. He set up the Reconstruction Finance Corporation, the Federal Farm Board, the Federal Home Loan Banks, and established the federal relief of unemployed.

Following the second World War, Mr. Hoover served in the relief of 750 million people in the postwar famine in 35 countries. In 1948 he served as Chairman of the first Commission on Reorganization of the Executive Departments of the Government; President Eisenhower appointed him again as chairman of the second commission. Mr. Hoover continued this vital task until June, 1955 when he retired after 42 continuous years of public service in and out of government. The former President served without compensation for himself, and his salary was always returned to the government or used in a good public cause.

Herbert Hoover is revered throughout the world as the symbol of public service in every human field.

GEORGE WASHINGTON

First President of the United States

THE FIRST INAUGURATION day in the history of the United States was Thursday, April 30, 1789. On that day, 168 years ago, George Washington stood on the balcony of the Federal Hall in New York City, and solemnly swore to "preserve, protect, and defend the Constitution of the United States."

The cheering of the people in the street below nearly drowned out the first President's voice. Cannon roared. Church bells pealed. It was a joyous occasion for all but Washington himself, who seemed almost overwhelmed by the responsibility he had taken upon his shoulders. Only a few days before the Inauguration, he had confided to a friend that he lacked the skill and ability "necessary to manage the helm," and felt like a man going to his place of execution.

Washington was elected unanimously by a grateful Nation, which hailed him as the hero of the struggle for American independence. The story of that struggle, with its tears and sorrows, its brave deeds and heroic sacrifices, with the noble figure of Washington moving across the scene, stirs American hearts to this day.

Washington crossing the Delaware . . . Washington at Valley Forge . . . Washington accepting the surrender of Cornwallis at Yorktown . . . Washington bidding an affectionate farewell to his Continental Army before returning to his beloved Mount Vernon in 1783 for what he hoped would be an untroubled retirement.

Washington enjoyed four years at Mount Vernon before he was called back to duty to preside over the Federal Convention, which assembled in Philadelphia in 1787 to draft the Constitution. By the summer of 1788 the Constitution was ratified, and preparations were made for the first presidential election the following year. On April 6, 1789, the new Congress of the United States met in New York to count the electoral votes, all of them for Washington.

The President-elect, who had returned home once again after the Federal Convention finished its task, left Mount Vernon 10 days later—on April 16—to travel to New York. Wildly cheering people lined his route. The city was bulging with visitors, and everywhere the carnival spirit prevailed.

Washington's Inaugural Address was delivered in the Senate Chamber of Federal Hall before a Joint Session of the Senate and the House of Representatives, while the great crowds in the street continued to celebrate the swearing-in of their First President. After the Inaugural ceremony ended, the President and the members of Congress went to St. Paul's Church on Lower Broadway to pray for the future of the new Republic.

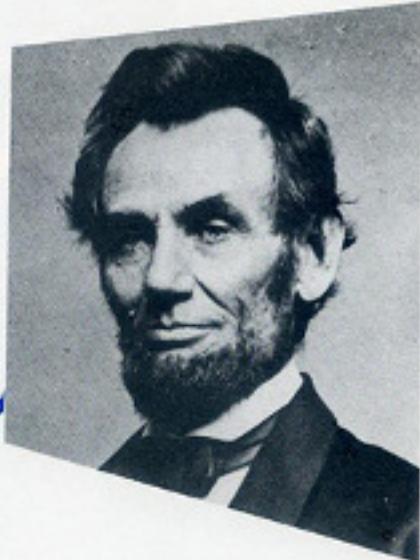

President Washington took the oath of office a second time at Independence Hall, Philadelphia, March 4, 1793, without pomp or ceremony. His Inaugural Address on this occasion was the shortest on record, consisting of 134 words.

On September 17, 1796, one of the great documents in American history was published—Washington's Farewell Address to his countrymen, in which he warned of the pitfalls to be expected in the years ahead, at home and abroad. In December of the same year, he met the two Houses of Congress for the last time.

On retiring from the presidency, Washington once more withdrew to Mount Vernon, and it was there that he died, after a brief illness, on December 14, 1799.

ABRAHAM LINCOLN

First Republican President of the United States

ABRAHAM LINCOLN became the 16th President of the United States at a tense, dramatic moment in American history.

War clouds were heavy over Washington on Inauguration Day—March 4, 1861. The streets leading to the Capitol bristled with loaded cannon, and with the rifles of infantrymen and cavalrymen.

It was a solemn, grim-faced Lincoln who took the oath of office from the aged Chief Justice Roger B. Taney on the steps of the still-unfinished Capitol. A multitude of citizens heard him deliver a warning to the South:

"In your hands, my dissatisfied fellow countrymen, and not in mine, is the momentous issue of civil war. The government will not assail you. You can have no conflict without being yourselves the aggressors. You have no oath registered in heaven to destroy the government, while I shall have the most solemn one to 'preserve, protect, and defend' it."

But it was of no avail. A month later, Confederate batteries fired on Fort Sumter, and the war was on. Heartbreaking, backbreaking responsibilities were thrust upon the humble lawyer from Springfield, Illinois, whose philosophy was that "this government cannot endure permanently half-slave and half-free."

The Constitution designated the President as Commander-in-Chief of the Army, and Lincoln accepted this vital role without hesitation. As a result, his enemies blamed him whenever there was a reversal on the battle-field. The Nation, however, had come to recognize the greatness of the man, and he was re-elected on the Republican ticket in 1864, with 212 electoral votes to only 21 for his opponent.

When Lincoln's second Inauguration Day came, the war was almost over, but the heart of the Nation was heavy on March 4, 1865. The fighting had taken an awful toll, and Lincoln's gaunt frame was stooped, and his kindly face was stamped with sadness, as he took the oath before a vast crowd assembled in the Capitol Plaza. His Second Inaugural Address contained the immortal words:

"With malice toward none, with charity for all, with firmness in the right as God gives us to see the right, let us strive on to finish the work we are in, to bind up the nation's wounds, to care for him who shall have borne the battle and for his widow and his orphan, to do all which may achieve and cherish a just and lasting peace among ourselves and with all nations."

A month later—on April 9, 1865—Lee surrendered to Grant at Appomattox, and the war was at an end. But Lincoln was not to lead the Nation to the re-union he had so often prayed for during his fateful days in the White House.

On Good Friday, April 14, only six days after the war ended, John Wilkes Booth shot the President at Ford's Theater, while Mr. and Mrs. Lincoln were attending a performance of "Our American Cousin."

At 7:22 in the morning of April 15, Abraham Lincoln died, and his body was removed to Springfield for burial. The whole Nation mourned the loss of this great and noble man, of whom it was said:

"Now he belongs to the ages."

The Eisenhower Family

THE PRESIDENT and First Lady established their first home in two-room quarters in 1916 at Fort Sam Houston, Texas. Since then they have lived at various Army posts in the United States, France, Panama Canal Zone and the Philippines. The permanent residence of the Eisenhowers is now a farm home at Gettysburg, Pennsylvania where the four grandchildren are frequent visitors. In the 1956 Easter Day photo above, the President and his son, Major John Eisenhower are standing behind Barbara Anne, born at West Point on May 30, 1949; Dwight David 2nd, born at West Point on March 31, 1948; Susan Elaine, born at Fort Knox, Kentucky on December 31, 1951; Mrs. Mamie Eisenhower is holding the youngest grandchild, Mary Jean who was born December 21, 1955 in Washington; and Mrs. John Eisenhower.

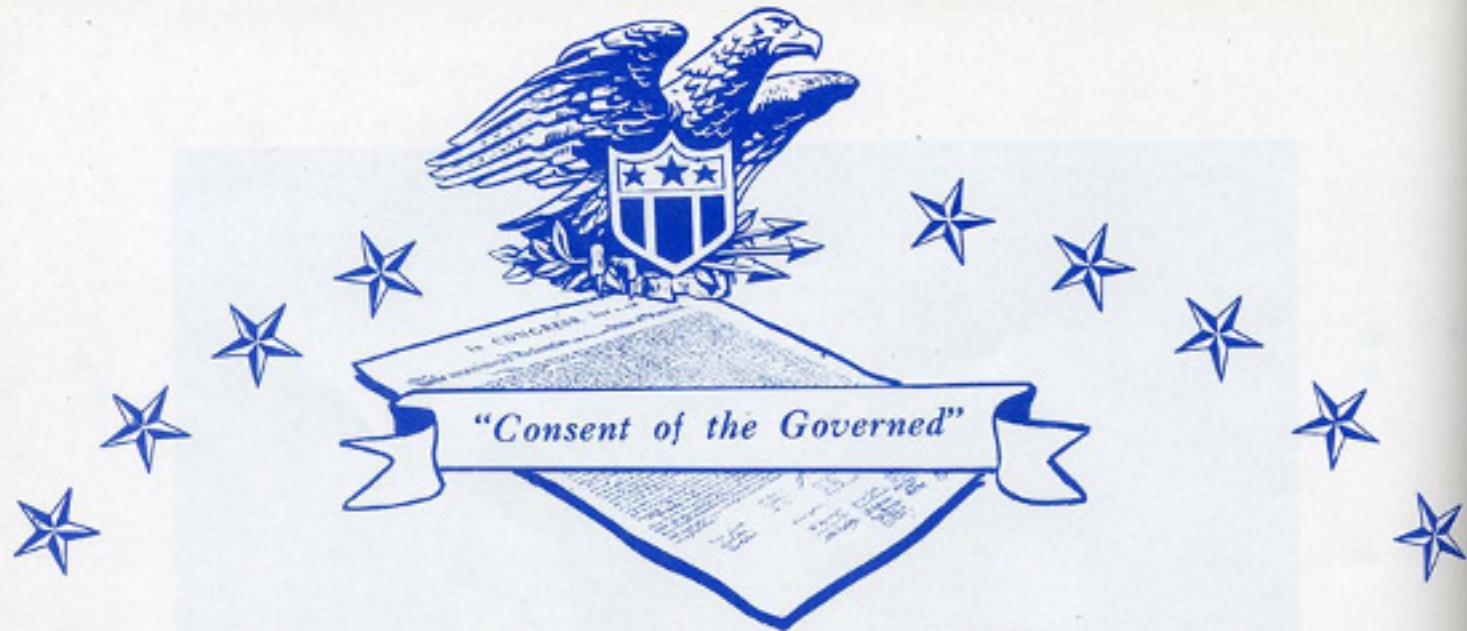

The Nixon Family

VICE PRESIDENT and Mrs. Nixon have been members of Washington's "official family" since January, 1947 when he began his first term as a member of the U. S. House of Representatives. The Nixons first lived in a small apartment across the Potomac River in Alexandria, Virginia; and now reside in the Spring Valley section of Washington. They are frequent visitors in Whittier, California where the Vice President attended college and also practiced law. The Nixons established homes during his naval service in Iowa, Pennsylvania, Maryland, New York City and San Francisco. The photo above was taken during the autumn of 1956 and shows the Vice President and Mrs. Nixon with Patricia, born in Whittier on February 21, 1946; and Julie, born July 5, 1948 in Washington.

Participation*

The 1957 Inaugural Parade will be an impressive, fast-moving and colorful spectacle, based upon the "Consent of the Governed" theme of the 43rd Inauguration.

The parade will assemble within the area from the west curb of 7th Street S.E., to the east curb of 4th Street S.W. The initial point will be at the intersection of New Jersey and Independence Avenues.

The marchers will cross the Capitol Plaza, turn left into Constitution Avenue, then swing along Pennsylvania Avenue to 15th Street N.W. The parade will turn north on 15th Street, then west again on Pennsylvania Avenue at the Treasury Department Building.

At that point, the parade participants will enter the Court of "The Spirit of Freedom," where the President and Vice President will leave the line of march to review the parade from the Presidential Reviewing stand, located in front of the White House.

After leaving the Court of "The Spirit of Freedom," the parade will enter dispersal areas beginning at 17th Street and ending at 23rd Street.

The parade is expected to pass the Presidential reviewing stand in about two hours. The grandstands located along the line of march will accommodate 65,800 persons, which is 2,900 more than in 1953.

Inaugural

TO BE HELD THE EVENING OF JANUARY

THE INAUGURAL BALL is a tradition dating back to a spring evening in 1789 when gentlemen in powdered wigs and handsomely-gowned ladies danced the minuet before George and Martha Washington.

The painting above is a historical record of the first Inaugural Ball, held in the hall of the New York Dancing Assemblies on lower Broadway.

Some records list President Madison's first ball on the evening of March 4, 1809 as the first ball, because it was the first to be arranged as an official event of Inauguration day.

Precedent for having the Inaugural Ball in more than one location dates from the Inauguration of President Harrison in 1841 when three balls were held. Four years later, two balls were given in honor of President Polk.

The Pension Office, which had an exceptionally large hall and a balcony, was the scene of some of the gayest and most elaborate balls in history from 1885 to 1909. There were no balls in 1913 and 1917 when President Wilson was inaugurated, and the custom continued until 1933 when balls again became an official event of the Inauguration.

Inaugural Ball

JANUARY 21, 1957, WASHINGTON, D. C.

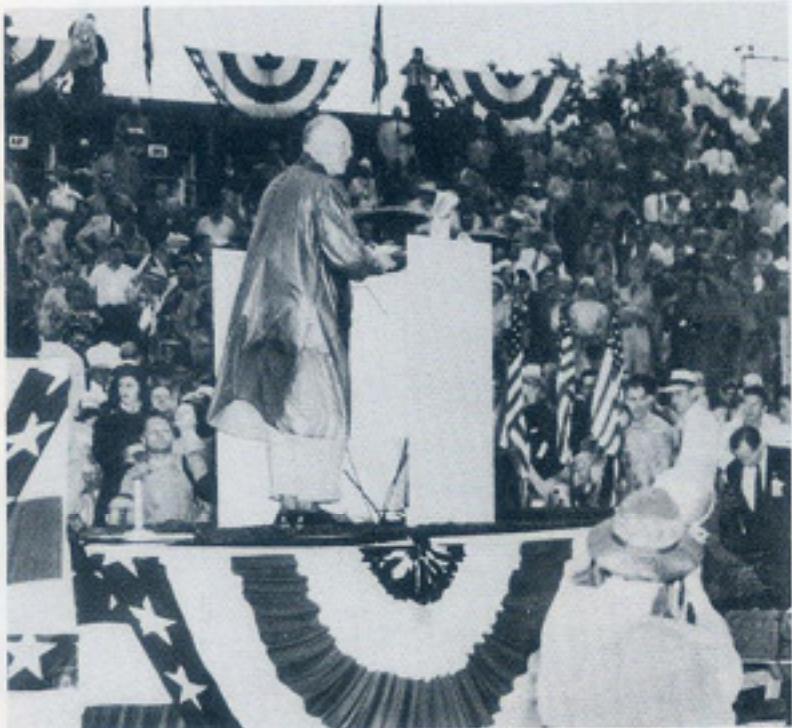

ITHE INAUGURAL BALL—the gracious and memorable social event of the 43rd Inauguration—will be held simultaneously in four locations the evening of January 21, 1957. Balls will be at the National Guard Armory, the Mayflower Hotel, the Sheraton Park Hotel and the Statler Hotel.

Decorations are planned around the Inaugural theme "Consent of the Governed," and will feature the replicas of official seals of the President, Vice President and the Cabinet. Pastel colors and subdued lighting will give the fullest effects to the ball gowns of the ladies. Two orchestras will play at each ball for dancing.

The President and Mrs. Eisenhower and the Vice President and Mrs. Nixon will attend the four celebrations.

Each of the states will have an official box at one of the ball locations. Guests, officials, and Members of Congress from a particular state will be invited to attend the ball at the location where the state is assigned. Members of the Diplomatic Corps, Cabinet officers, and patrons and patronesses will be in attendance in equal number at each ball.

Pictorial Review of the FIRST FOUR YEARS

Dwight D. Eisenhower begins his crusade five years ago with a homecoming speech in Abilene, Kansas, standing bareheaded in the rain—one of the great dramatic moments in American politics.

Vice President Nixon meets Sir Winston Churchill upon his arrival in Washington, June 1954.

The President-elect visits Korea in 1952, fulfilling his campaign promise. Within six months after taking office, the fighting ended in Korea.

West Germany's Konrad Adenauer arrives in Washington to meet the President, and is greeted by Secretary of State Dulles and Vice President Nixon.

During 1956, President Eisenhower met with other hemisphere Presidents in Panama City to solidify relations with our neighbors to the South.

The Prime Minister of Canada and the President of Mexico meet with President Eisenhower.

On world tours covering 32 nations, Vice President Nixon proved an impressive ambassador of peace and good will. The enthusiastic crowds above greeted him in Manila, The Phillipines.

Scene during the final session of the Centennial Convention of the Republican Party, San Francisco Cow Palace.

Singing "God Bless America" from the podium at the Republican National Convention.

The President and First Lady wave to crowds during the Republican National Convention in San Francisco, August 1956.

The President, who always has a keen interest in farm matters, checks cattle fodder on a visit to a government research station.

The Republican standard bearers just before Vice President Nixon started his first swing of the 1956 campaign.

The President finds out for himself the opinions and needs of labor. He chats with workmen on a housing project.

"No one man—certainly not I—nor any political party could ever truthfully pretend that his efforts—or its efforts—alone can bring all good things to pass.

"But I dare speak a simple belief and—a simple prayer.

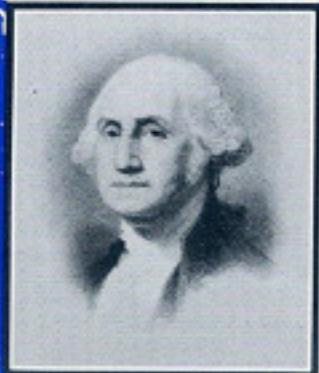

"I would dare believe that history may say that, during the years of my first Administration, the faith of our people—in the growth of peace and of justice—grew steadily stronger.

"And I would pray that—if it be the people's will that I continue my present service—the years of my second Administration may prove that—thanks to the labor of all Americans—this faith was justified."

—President Eisenhower at Pittsburgh, Pa., October 9, 1956

Welcome to your
NATION'S CAPITAL

TOMB OF UNKNOWN SOLDIER

"Here Rests in Honored Glory an American Soldier Known But to God." This is the simple inscription on the Tomb of the Unknown Soldier in Arlington National Cemetery. The tomb, carved from a block of white marble, overlooks the City of Washington. It contains the body of an unknown soldier who fell in France during World War I. The entombment took place on Armistice Day, November 11, 1921, in the presence of President Harding.

ROCK CREEK PARK

The beauty of Washington is enhanced by Rock Creek Park, which traverses the city from the Maryland state line in the northwest to the Potomac River near the Lincoln Memorial. This natural park, roamed many years ago by the Algonquin Indians, consists of 1,752 acres of woods, brooks and streams. A recreational haven for Washingtonians, it contains 27 miles of bridle paths and 11 miles of foot trails.

WHITE HOUSE

President John Adams became the first occupant of the White House, then known as "The President's House," in 1800. The Executive Mansion, built of Virginia sandstone, stands at 1600 Pennsylvania Avenue, about one mile and a half northwest of the Capitol. It was reopened in April, 1952, after being closed 3½ years for interior reconstruction and remodeling.

LINCOLN MEMORIAL

One of the most impressive of all the monuments and public buildings in the Capitol is the Lincoln Memorial. This great marble temple, with its 50-foot-high Greek Ionic columns, is at the entrance to the Memorial Bridge leading to Arlington National Cemetery and the Tomb of the Unknown Soldier. Lincoln's Gettysburg Address is inscribed on the south wall of the Memorial, and on the north wall is his Second Inaugural Address.

WASHINGTON MONUMENT

The cornerstone of the Washington Monument was laid in 1848, but it was not until 1884 — 85 years after the First President's death — that the white marble shaft was completed. The Monument, which stands between the Capitol and the Lincoln Memorial, is more than 555 feet in height, and contains 898 steps from the entrance level to the 500-foot observation chamber.

UNITED STATES CAPITOL

The U. S. Capitol — the heart of the Nation — stands as an impressive symbol of the American form of government. The Statue of Freedom surmounting the dome is of bronze and weighs almost 15,000 pounds. George Washington laid the cornerstone of the north section of the building on September 18, 1793. Congress met for the first time in the North Wing in 1800, but not until 1863 was the structure completed substantially as it is today.

SUPREME COURT

This magnificent marble structure on Capitol Hill houses the Nation's highest tribunal—the Supreme Court of the United States. Prior to its completion in 1935, the sessions of the Court were held in the Capitol. The Court Chamber, where the nine Justices sit, is a great hall flanked by Ionic columns of Italian marble, and draped with curtains of rich dark-red velvet.

MELLON ART GALLERY

The National Gallery of Art, a gift to the Nation by the late Andrew W. Mellon, was built at a cost of more than $15,000,000, and was opened to the public in March, 1941. One of the largest marble structures in the world, it houses a priceless collection of paintings and sculpture dating from the 13th to the 19th century. The handsome building, also known as the Mellon Art Gallery, faces the Mall, and has a second impressive entrance on Constitution Avenue at 6th Street, N. W.

MOUNT VERNON

Stately Mount Vernon, the home and burial place of George Washington, is on the Virginia shore of the Potomac River, 15 miles south of the Nation's Capitol. The 18th century plantation home has been restored, and contains many historic documents and relics of the American Revolution and the early days of the Republic.

INAUGURAL MEDAL

THE INAUGURAL MEDAL for the second inauguration of Dwight D. Eisenhower and Richard M. Nixon, pictured above, is a memorable souvenir of the 43rd Inauguration.

Two originals of this medal are struck in gold in the same size, about 2½ inches, and presented to the President and Vice President after the Inauguration. Silver and bronze medals are also struck for sale to the general public.

This is the first Inaugural Medal to bear the likeness of both the President and Vice President on the face since 1909 when President William Howard Taft and Vice President James S. Sherman were both depicted on the face of the medal. The 1957 medal is the twelfth to be struck since the custom of Inaugural Medals started in 1901 on the occasion of the second inauguration of President McKinley.

Walker Hancock, an American sculptor of international fame, designed the 1957 medal. The first medal of President Eisenhower in 1953 was also created by Mr. Hancock, and the 1957 medal follows the impressive simplicity of the 1953 medal.

A resident of Gloucester, Massachusetts, Mr. Hancock is currently in Rome, Italy, at the American Academy. He has won many awards, including the Widener Gold Medal and the Prix de Rome. Among his distinguished works are the War Memorial of the Pennsylvania Railroad at Philadelphia, the World War II Air Medal and the U.S. Marine Corps Expeditionary Medal.

Designed in Rome, the finished models of the 1957 Inaugural Medal were flown to the United States to be struck by the Medallic Art Company of New York City, one of the foremost firm of medalist in the United States.

How to get your Inaugural Medal . . .

Bronze and silver Inaugural Medals may be obtained by writing Gilbert Hahn, Jr., Chairman, 1957 Inaugural Medal Committee, 1022-15th Street, N.W., Washington, D.C. The price, postage paid, is $3.50 for the bronze medal and $27.50 for a serialized silver medal. Add 2% sales tax if mailed to the District of Columbia.

The President's PRAYER

Almighty God

As we stand here at this moment, my future associates in the executive branch of the Government join me in beseeching that Thou will make full and complete our dedication to the service of the people in this throng and their fellow citizens everywhere.

Give us, we pray, the power to discern clearly right from wrong and allow all our words and actions to be governed thereby and by the laws of this land.

Especially we pray that our concern shall be for all the people, regardless of station, race or calling.

May cooperation be permitted and be the mutual aim of those who, under the concept of our Constitution, hold to differing political beliefs—so that all may work for the good of our beloved country and for Thy Glory

Amen

President Dwight David Eisenhower prefaced his Inaugural Address on January 20, 1953 with what he called this "Little Prayer of My Own"
